Eplemdidly Costomed.—Am Acquaintance of our rather famous for his manner of "getting up" agher phrases it recently appeared on Broadway, attired in the new fashioned (frog skirted) overcoat, with the usual et ceteras of pelinhed boots, new hr-, (beg parden.) pantaloons, vest, &c., but with a hat almost as assedy as that of the "Lime Kiln Man." Of course, this detracted very much from the designed effect, though it detracted our attention. We stopped him, and, laughthaly, inquired the meaning of his eccentricity. "Confound it?" was is abrupt reply, "I bought a salendid article—conception grand, execution artistic, material tip top; I bought it yesterday. Having eccasion to visit a friend at the St. Nicholas, I carelessly, placed my hat among some dozen others, and when I looked for it it had vanished. Mine was a Knox, sir! yes, a Knox I and though there were specimens of every hatter in town, the rest were overloosed and mine was stolen." We pitted our friend, and left him with an increased belief in the popularity of KNOX, of No. 128 Fulton street, and Mo. 553 Broadway.
